9:15 am Violent Islamic Networks and Their Meaning for U.S. Policy
Peter Bergen, Harvard University

Al Qaeda may be the most notorious Islamic terror network but it is not the only one dedicated to the violent overthrow of western democracies and Muslim autocracies. Others include Jemaah Islamiyya, which is active in Southeast Asia, and the Moroccan Islamic Combat Group and Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, which are active in North Africa and Europe. It is important to understand the philosophy and modus operandi of these groups, what they believe in, what they hope to achieve, and their chosen methods for attaining these goals. It is also necessary to examine the links and cooperation among these terror networks.

- Is the ultimate goal of the violent Islamic networks the eviction of the West from Muslim lands or the establishment of the Ummah?
- Is the overthrow of autocratic Islamic regimes a necessary step in the process or can these regimes be co-opted?
- Is the use of suicide missions part of the ideology of the groups or merely an effective tactical method of warfare?
- How relevant is Osama Bin Laden today? What will be the impact on al Qaeda if he dies of natural causes, is killed, or captured?

Islamic Parties in the Arab World:

What They Stand for and How They Would Govern

Shafeeq Ghabra, Kuwait University, Kuwait City

The success of the FIS (Islamic Salvation Front), Hamas and Hezbollah in democratic elections in Algeria, Palestine and Lebanon has led many to believe that Islamic political parties have a simple agenda: "One man, one vote, one time." The endless crackdowns by the Egyptian government against the Muslim Brotherhood reflect this fear. Yet Islamic parties have participated in peaceful elections and assemblies in some Arab countries including Jordan and Kuwait. To what extent can one generalize about Islamic parties in the Arab world? What common features do they have? What is their perspective on western democracy with its strong emphasis on individual freedoms and human rights?

- Which have been the most successful and most troubling experiences with Islamic parties in the Arab world?
- What are the main differences between the key Islamic parties?
- Is there a moderate wing to the Muslim brotherhood? What are its views on social rights?
- What are the latest developments in political reform in the Gulf countries?

9:00 am Muslims in Europe:
Distinctions and Similarities with the U.S. Experience
Justin Vaisse, Institut d'Etudes Politiques, Paris

Europe faces a serious challenge from its growing Muslim population. However, there are significant differences among the Muslim communities in each European country. France and Spain's Muslims are mainly of North African background; Germany's Muslims herald from Turkey and Bosnia; Britain's Muslims are mainly from South Asia. The smaller European countries such as Denmark and Holland have faced traumatic confrontations with Islamic extremists and strong political backlash against Muslim immigration is now underway. Perhaps the most serious issue is the emergence of European born Islamic extremists who are prepared to conduct acts of mass violence against the civilian populations. The bombings and attempted bombings in London are prime examples of such acts.

- Which European countries have been the most and least successful in confronting the security, social and economic consequences of the Islamic challenge?
- How much Islamic anger is based on social and economic conditions as distinct from religious antagonisms?
- Is growing anti-Semitism in Europe primarily a Muslim issue related to the Arab-Israeli conflict or are other factors at work?
- What is the relationship between the extremism of Europe's Muslims and the generational factor?
- What lessons should U.S. decision-makers draw from the European experience?

9:00 am Islamist Parties in Southeast Asia: The Experience to Date
Robin Bush, The Asia Foundation, Jakarta

Since 9/11 Americans have been preoccupied with the role and behavior of Islamic parties in the Middle East. Far less attention has been paid to the role Islamic parties play in the politics of Southeast Asia. Yet Indonesia is the world's most populous Muslim country and Malaysia is one of the most successful. There have been horrific acts of terror in the region, most notably the Bali bombings in 2002 and 2005 which were directed against western tourists, mainly from Australia. It is important to understand the experience of the Southeast Asian countries in dealing with their terrorism problems and the challenges they pose for governance.

- What are the basic attitudes of the key Islamic parties of Southeast Asia toward the West, secularism and civic society, including minority rights?
- Has terrorism in Southeast Asia changed the attitude and behavior of moderate Islamic parties towards extremism? Are their policies successful? What is the linkage between Islamic extremism and separatism?
- What are the similarities and dissimilarities between Southeast Asian Islamic parties and their counterparts in the Middle East and South Asia?

- How do the Islamic parties relate to the growing role of China, India and Japan in their region?

Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Colleague:

Pursuant to House Rule XXV, clause 5(d)(2), the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct hereby approves your proposed trip for you and your spouse to Paris, France scheduled for August 14 to 24, 2008 sponsored by the Aspen Institute Congressional Program. We note that this trip includes four days at your personal expense.

You must complete a Member Travel Disclosure Form and file it with the Clerk of the House within 15 days after your return from travel. As part of that filing, you are required to attach a copy of this letter and both the Private Sponsor Travel Certification Form (including attachments) and Member travel approval form you previously submitted to the Committee. You must also report all travel expenses totaling more than $335 from a single source on Schedule VII of your annual Financial Disclosure Statement.

Because the trip may involve meetings with foreign government representatives, we note that House Members may accept, under the Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, gifts "of minimal value [currently $335] tendered as a souvenir or mark of courtesy" by a foreign government. Any tangible gifts valued in excess of $335 received from a foreign government by you or your spouse must, within 60 days of acceptance, be turned over to the Clerk of the House and disclosed on a Form for Disclosing Gifts from Foreign Governments.

If you have any further questions, please contact the Committee's Office of Advice and Education at extension 5-7103.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Tubbs Jones
